A.W. Bremner Ends His Life by a Plunge in the Harlem

The Philadelphia Enquirer      08 AUG 1897

Sent His Family to the Country, Wrote a Note to the Public and Took the Fatal Leap

New York, Aug 7. – After sending his wife, mother-in-law and two sisters-in-law to the country, A.W. Bremner committed suicide by throwing himself into the Harlem River. His body was found to-day at the foot of West One-hundred-and-thirty-ninth street.

A letter in one of his pockets was addressed to the general public and requested that in case his body was found to notify his wife at the address given. A pass on the Manhattan Elevated Railroad was found in another pocket. Mr. Bremner was an employee of the company. His flat is handsomely furnished and he lived in comfort. A gold watch and chain were also found in his pockets, but no money.

At Mr. Bremner's flat it was learned that his family left for the country yesterday afternoon. During their absence it was understood that Mr. Bremner was to live with his brother in Brooklyn.

Edward Smith, Mr. Bremner's son-in-law, of No. 17 West One-hundred-and twenty-first street, said:

“Mr. Bremner sustained a sunstroke in July and since then it has been feared at times that his mind had been affected.”
